

IN THE ABSTRACT:

Please DELETE the Abstract as filed in its entirety and substitute the attached new Abstract.

A method and system for transferring applications to a different platform, which prevents manual creation of graphical user interface (GUI) definition at the target platform. Accordingly, GUI definitions for target applications are automatically created from GUI definitions in original applications by using the GUI definition file for the original application to display menus and create a GUI definition file for the application in the target environment to which GUI information obtained from the displayed menu statuses has been added.